use the catchphrase 'never settle' and rightfully so. At a reasonable budget, they brought out the 5T, which compares with the top models on offer. The phone has a 15.24cm (6-inch) AMOLED screen with 2160x1080 pixel resolution and 18:9 ratio. It operates on Android Nougat 7.1.1, which can be upgraded to Android Oreo 8.0. The front camera has a 16MP capacity, while at the back, there are dual cameras of capacities 16MP and 20MP.

The lens quality and aperture make the 5T a great camera phone. It is one of the fastest phones in its price range, running on Snapdragon 835 2.45GHz octa-core processor. RAM and internal storage are variable and go up to a massive 8GB and 128GB, respectively. It is powered by 3300mAh battery. OnePlus 5T starts at ₹ 32,999.

Honor View 10. Huawei has produced a great value-for-money phone in the form of Honor View 10. The 15.21cm (5.99-inch) display screen has a 2160x1080p resolution. It runs on the strong Kirin 970 1.8GHz octa-core processor. The camera on this smartphone is impressive, with 13MP in the front and two dual cameras, 20MP and 16MP, at the back. The battery life is great, too, providing 3750mAh to keep it running. It includes 6GB RAM and 128GB storage, which can be further expanded. The phone supports dual 4G SIMs and Android Oreo 8.0 out-of-the-box. The processor has its own AI suite, developed through a neural processing unit, which makes the phone work as a daily assistant. Facial recognition and a smooth user interface make Honor View 10 a great grab. It is priced at ₹ 30,000.

iPhone X. Revealed in September last year, Apple's flagship phone is iPhone X. The 14.7cm (5.8-inch) phone brings a display resolution of 2436x1125 pixel and runs on the latest iOS 11 software. It contains a superior-quality 12MP primary camera and 7MP front camera. The device is powered by 2716mAh non-removable battery.

The USP of iPhone X is A11 hexa-core bionic processor, coupled with 3GB RAM. The processor, as explained before, beats almost all other chips in the market. The AI suite, assisted by assistant Siri, has a matured involvement with your activities. There is a facial recognition suite for locking and unlocking the device. Animoji feature is really fun, too. The phone supports a single SIM card, and its price starts at ₹ 79,990. EFY
