

DIFFERENT WAYS TO MAKE YOUR TV SMART

Paromik Chakraborty

Turn your TV into a media centre with devices available in your household

Sunday is almost here and you are keen on making the most of it by binge-watching your favourite Netflix series without getting out of your bed. Now that you have made up your mind, you think to yourself, "Would it not be better to stream the show directly on my TV?" Alas, your TV is not among the smart ones sold today! So, will you settle with your smaller laptop with less sound or a headphone around ear? Well, you actually have some alternative ways to make the most out of your TV.

Attaching the Google Chromecast to the TV (Source: techadvisor.co.uk)

Use a streaming stick

If you have a media streaming stick like Google Chromecast, Amazon Firestick or Roku Stick, you already have everything you need! Streaming sticks are quite popular and affordable now, and there are many options to choose from.

All these devices follow similar process of installation and are aided by mobile applications. Usually, media devices connect to the television via HDMI ports.

Connect the device to your TV and turn it on. You will find the welcome screen along with the device name and a website URL from where you can download the necessary application. Use your smartphone or tablet (iOS or Android) to download the application. If you are using a computer (Windows or Mac), visit the URL displayed on the screen, download the application in your computer and open it.

Select Connect to Devices option. Your streaming device will be detected by the application. Minimise the appli-

Surfing movies and TV shows on PS4 (Source: psmedia.playstation.com)