

available in some smart TVs. This feature is great if you want to watch the TV without disturbing the whole house. A two-way audio connection helps connect audio with the TV using Bluetooth, and at the same time you can connect your cellphone with a sound system via Bluetooth.

Built-in screen audio technology has revolutionised the audio sounds of TVs. For example, Bravia OLED series from Sony has made the whole screen resonate to produce sound. Sony Bravia OLED master series A9F is the world's-first acoustic surface sound system. It lets sound emanate directly from the screen itself, providing sound and image synchronisation.

Basic specifications to watch out for Everyone wants the smart TV to be easy to use. In a smart TV, there are three available options when you press the home button on the remote: Live TV, Apps and Devices. This makes it easy to navigate and find things by helpfully storing all the apps in a single location. You can pin your favourite apps to the home page for quicker access.

You can also get hour-by-hour recommendations for TV shows and movies. This can help you keep track of upcoming movies and TV shows.

A few basic specifications to watch out for are:

Refresh rate. It is the pace at which the TV screen changes images without any motion blur. For a good experience, do not go for a TV with less than 120Hz refresh rate.

Contrast ratio. A contrast ratio of 3000:1 is advised. Lower contrast ratio results in lower clarity.

Ports. At least four ports should be available, including USB, HDMI, audio/video and VGA. For USB port, make sure it supports all hard disks and pen drives to play videos.

HDMI is the most important input that supports all major forms of digital video sources, including set-top boxes, Blu-Ray players, cameras, game consoles, cellphones, camcorders, tablets and PCs through a single cable. Make sure at least one of the HDMI ports is HDMI 2.0 or HDCP 2.2 if you are buying a 4K screen, as it supports 4K video at 60 frames per second (fps).

Operating system. A smart TV should have a high operating speed to run online content like videos and music. There are five main smart operating systems, namely, Android TV, Tizen, webOS, SmartCast and Roku TV.

Memory. A smart TV having at least 1GB RAM and 4GB ROM will give a seamless performance.

Game support. If you want the best TV for gaming, you need to look for short lag times (28.2 milliseconds), at least 120Hz refresh rate, plenty of HDMI ports and robust HDR support.

There are a number of brands and TVs available in the market. We are sure there will be one that will fit your needs and budget. All you need to do is make a list of features you want in your new TV and visit a consumer electronics store. EFY
