India installs LED lights on the streets of Bangladesh, Maldives

To bolster the new energy security architecture in neighbouring countries, India has installed all-new LED lights on the streets of cities in Bangladesh and Maldives. This is part of an initiative by the Ministry of External Affairs (MEA), which has been undertaken by the state-owned Energy Efficiency Services Ltd (EESL).

The initiative is to help neighbouring countries light up their streets, save energy and reduce tonnes of carbon emissions. Called the South Asia-focused Neighbourhood-First Policy, this initiative has been announced by Prime Minister Narendra Modi to counter China's Belt and Road initiative, which is aimed at connecting countries across Asia, Africa and Europe. India has been playing a pivotal role in creating a new energy ecosystem within some of its neighbouring countries.

Saurabh Kumar, managing director, EESL, said in an interview with Mint, "We have just completed installing streetlights in Male. Recently, we made a joint investment in the Maldives for around 2500 streetlights. We are doing this along with the MEA."
