D-Link DSP-W215. D-Link's Wi-Fi-enabled smart plug comes in an attractive design. A useful feature of W215 is an inbuilt thermal sensor that automatically turns off appliances in case of overheating. It has maximum power capacity of 16A, 260V. So, smaller air-conditioners (about 1T volume) can run on it.

mydlink app enables you to track power usage and receive push notifications whenever the plug turns on or off. It can be purchased for ₹ 1399.

Thrumm Wi-Fi smart plug. Thrumm offers an easy-to-use, everyday smart plug for moderate-power appliances like TV, water purifier, set-top box and more. The plug supports load up to 10A, 240V. It is made of flame-retardant material to prevent risks at high temperature.

It also works with Amazon Echo and Google Home. Smart Life app provides energy consumption data. Overload protection ensures appliances are safe even in high-power conditions. A manual switch helps override the controls whenever required. It comes with one-year warranty, and is priced at ₹ 1499.

TP-Link HS100. TP-Link HS100 is a Wi-Fi-compatible device that supports remote access control through its mobile application Kasa, allowing you to control it from anywhere, in addition to fixing schedules.

The smart plug can connect with Amazon Alexa. An interesting feature of HS100 is its away mode, which randomly turns appliances on and off while no one is at home. It imitates the presence of people in the house, reducing risks of theft or burglary. The smart plug also comes with IFTTT support. The gadget is compatible with 100V AC appliances. It is available for ₹ 1720.

Smarteefi smart strip. Smarteefi brings an interesting product in the form of a Wi-Fi-enabled smart power strip. It comes with three sockets, all of which can be controlled by Smarteefi mobile application (runs on Android as well as iOS). Each socket can be programmed separately.

Alongside usual smart power source functions, like remote controlling, timer and real-time notifications, it also supports last state preservation feature to resume functions automatically after a power cut.

The gadget can be voice-controlled, too. It is recommended for basic- and medium-load usage. High-load appliances should be avoided. It is priced at ₹ 2799.

Pert plug. The smart plug by Pert can be used for general-purpose devices as well as for heavy-load appliances (up to 3kW). It has over-heat protection to ensure proper functioning of high-power appliances like water pumps, air-conditioners (any volume), geysers and the like.

Pert plug provides detailed analytics of energy consumption to help you control your electricity expenses. It also sends real-time notifications in case there is a risk of appliance malfunction. It is priced at ₹ 3999. EFY
