ments, which is why the need for 1GHz has been stated in ITU documents. At least 800MHz should be made available in a frequency band above 6GHz band per operator for the deployment of basic 5G services. At present, 26GHz band has most of the 5G ecosystem equipment developed.

Digital technologies to generate US$ 1 trillion economic value for India

According to a report by Ernst & Young, digital technologies are all set to generate one trillion dollars in economic value for India. These will contribute twenty per cent to the country's nominal GDP, and sustain 60 to 65 million jobs by 2025.

The report noted that by 2025, India is expected to have ninety per cent Internet penetration with 850 million users, with rural base growing 2.5 times as compared to the urban base. It mentioned that the digital economy has the potential to sustain 60 to 65 million employment opportunities for women, differently-abled people, skilled and semi-skilled workers across digitally-enabled businesses in urban, semi-urban and rural areas.

As per the report, the Indian e-commerce and consumer Internet sectors are also set to reach US$ 200 billion by 2027, and are significant avenues to provide employment and build entrepreneurship in the country.

It added that by scaling eighty per cent of India's e-commerce supply chain to digital value chain, one could generate an additional economic value of five billion dollars to ten billion dollars by 2025.

MeitY to invest in 100 AI-based language translation startups

According to a recent report by Economic Times, Ministry of Electronics and Information Technology (MeitY) is planning to invest in hundred artificial intelligence (AI)-based language translation startups that offer their services for different regional languages.

MeitY has named the project Natural Languages Translation Mission. As a part of this project, the startups will translate parliament and election commission records that exist in an array of 22 regional languages to form its primary database.
