Forrester expects the global mobile device user base to reach more than 5.5 billion by 2022, of which 3.8 billion will be smartphone users.

Nearly 94 per cent of smartphone owners use Android or iOS. Android is expected to capture 73 per cent of the market share (with more than 1.8 billion users) in 2017, followed by Apple (21 per cent) and Windows (4 per cent).

India's mobile production jumps ₹ 700 billion in three years

In FY 2016-17, mobile phones worth ₹ 900 billion were produced in India, as against ₹ 189 billion during 2014-15 and ₹ 540 billion during 2015-16, according to telecom minister Manoj Sinha. At the same time, mobile imports fell from 210 million devices (worth about $7948 million) in 2014-15 to 146 million units ($6059 million) in 2015-16.

The minister further said that all major domestic and foreign brands have either set up their manufacturing units already or are in the process of doing so. A number of firms have also sub-contracted manufacturing to electronics manufacturing services (EMS) companies.

ITs to get supercomputers for research

As part of the government's 'Make in India' initiative, supercomputers will be manufactured in India under a three-phase programme. In the initial two phases of the National Supercomputers Mission (NSM), the focus will be on designing and manufacturing subsystems such as high-speed Internet switches and compute nodes indigenously.

The plan is to have six supercomputers in the first phase, of which three supercomputers will be imported. System assemblies for the remaining three will be manufactured abroad, but assembled in India. C-DAC will be responsible for the overall system design.
