

Driving advances in automotive performance

The Automotive industry is held to the highest standards by consumers and the highly competitive market alike; both of which expect constant innovation in safety and performance.

In today's world innovation mostly comes through the advancement of electronic systems, which are critical to the smooth and safe operation of any vehicle. From interior switches and under-the-hood controls right through to exterior lighting and sensor systems, we develop innovative solutions that enhance performance, providing the 'complete solution' at all levels.

We work to the qualified standards of the world's most renowned automotive manufacturers, providing electrochemical solutions that not just meet, but constantly exceed expected standards.

The combination of our 70+ years' experience in producing performance enhancing electrochemical solutions, together with our high standards of customer service and global reach really begs the question...
