FACEBOOK TIPS AND TRICKS You Should Know

EFY BUREAU

Chances are you are already familiar with one of the most popular social networks, Facebook. And if you use it on a regular (or, occasional) basis, you must be aware of the regular features like add/delete friends, update statuses, walls and profile, add and explore pages and applications, among others. However, Facebook is no longer just a friendly little blue website you post your photos to. Gazillions of development hours have been put into making it what it is today. Read on to find out some of the latest and not-so-known tips and tricks in the world of Facebook.

Animated profile pic. From Facebook mobile app, select your profile picture and then select Take a New Profile Video to upload a short video loop of yourself. The result looks like a mix between an animated GIF and a moving picture.

Unfollow but not unfriend. If you want to stop seeing someone's posts in your News Feed without unfriending them, you can unfollow them to hide their activity. From someone's profile in the Facebook mobile app, tap on Following under their profile picture and then Unfollow to get rid of their posts completely. On the desktop, click on the drop-down arrow to the right of a post to unfollow a person.

Play basketball. Hidden away within Facebook Messenger, the basketball based plaything lets you challenge your friends to shoot some hoops directly within the chat window. But this is not something you are likely to stumble across either. To play, you need to send your friend a basketball emoji and then click on the sports-themed pictogram. This will launch the game over your chat, with both players' high scores being logged in the feed.

Download your entire Facebook history. You can actually download your entire Facebook history, to savour every last party photo, posts and your 4387 selfies for all eternity. But this could end up being a pretty big download if you are a real Facebook victim. It includes pictures and other media as well as text based posts. To back it all up, go to Settings and click on Download A Copy Of Your Facebook Data at the bottom of the page.

Make separate groups of people you are friends with. Creating separate groups can be useful to filter between what everyone is talking about in your News Feed. For instance, you may want to see what everyone from your hometown is sharing or just your friends from college. Facebook creates a list of friends by default based on common affiliation, whether it is the same hometown, school and so on. On Facebook's desktop site you can see all of your friend lists from this page and then add people to individual lists. This creates individual News Feeds within Facebook for you to browse.

Get alerted every time a login attempt is made. Facebook Login Alerts and Login Approvals can be enabled under Security Settings in the mobile app and desktop site. You can choose to get a Facebook notification or email whenever a login is made. Login Approvals mean that you will have to enter a secondary code sent to your phone before logging into Facebook on a new device.

Customise profile for public and individual friends. This is good for seeing what on your profile is visible to others, including individual friends you may have hidden certain information from in the past. When you are logged into Facebook on the desktop website, go to your profile, click on the ellipsis and then 'View as...'

Tell people how to pronounce your name correctly. Tired of people pronouncing your name wrong? Now you can teach them on Facebook. While editing your profile on the desktop, go to Details About You section to get started. You can also add a nickname or maiden name for yourself to display with your profile.

Stay on top of the hottest news with What's Trending. The topics that are currently being talked about the most on Facebook are featured on Trending list, which is accessible from the right of News Feed on the desktop and under the search bar in Facebook's mobile app. EFY
