

helps people to get to know your business. Moreover, it also clarifies your thinking.

The good part is, content is often scalable and can remove several bottlenecks. When done correctly, it is also shareable. Who does not want their customers to share their content with other prospects?

Carefully crafted content often becomes a business generation tool by itself. As one of the valuable assets, published content showcases you as an expert in your field. It helps in establishing credibility and therefore makes it easier to sell and bring in more business.

More and more businesses these days are philosophically driven. Many founders have a stronger purpose and connect with the ecosystem. But for your philosophy to become an asset it must be highly distinctive. Distinctive in the sense that if we spoke about your philosophy without mentioning your name, people would quickly realize we were talking about you.

But the content is cheaper to produce nowadays; don't you think so? And that means almost everyone is doing it. So, how can you do it better to stand out?

USING THE RIGHT FORMAT TO ENGAGE THE AUDIENCE AT A PSYCHOLOGICAL LEVEL WORKS WONDERFULLY

Format

The biggest issue today is the amount of junk on the internet. When every piece of content is screaming for attention, it gets noisy. So, to ensure you get the attention you deserve, it is critical to ensure your content is cutting through that noise and making it to the eyes or ears of your audience.

This is where the format comes into play. The format is the form in which your content or information is made available to your audience. It ranges from video, audio, print material, social media posts, animations, gif images, banners, posters, or anything similar.

Each form comes with its own pros and cons. For example, a digital banner shown on out-of-home (OOH) media may look much nicer but cannot be shared by the viewer. A useful video on YouTube is easy to share on several other channels, but if posted on a social media channel could be restricted to a single platform.

However, the crucial part of getting the format right always begins with knowing where your target audience gets their information from. Once you know it, it is easier to pick or discard the formats you might be using.

As much as your content is meant for your audience, we all want it to spread, and go viral. More views, likes, shares, etc can be a proxy for some sort of validation. And the key to having that attention-grabbing format lies in how well it is designed. Knowing how to use any format to maximize its impact on the audience at the psychological level is highly important. After all, that's how the message spreads.

So, how can you improve?

To put it simply, when you get the trio of product, content, and format rightly mixed, it has the potential to amplify your visibility.

A well-designed product becomes an asset. A well-designed content becomes an asset. And when both are delivered in the right format, it amplifies everything.

ZMoT IS THE REALITY OF TODAY'S MARKET, AND HAVING THE RIGHT KIND OF VISIBILITY CAN TILT THE BALANCE IN YOUR FAVOUR

The good news is—most businesses already have all these things available in some shape or form. So, it won't be a starting-from-scratch challenge.

Nonetheless, it requires continuous and diligent work, on all fronts. It may also mean everything cannot be DIY style. In the beginning, everything is done by one or two people in the business.

However, the visibility game needs more support and a functional mechanism to make it work consistently. Going DIY may be possible, but it would mean that DIYer becomes a bottleneck at all times, and that severely limits the speed of growth.

As always, the first step is to assess gaps and avenues for improvement. When you clearly see where's the scope to improve, improving becomes much easier.

ZMoT is the reality of today's market, and having the right kind of visibility can tilt the balance in your favour. So, ask yourself—are you a visible entrepreneur?

PS: You can check your visibility score with this quick 5-minute visibility test at https://bit.ly/visibility_test EFY